Hoover Says Ross Killer Not Involved in West Coast Crime

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 22—(UP)—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, today narrowed down to two cases—both confessed—the kidnaping of Peter Anders, abductor-slayer of Charles S. Ross.

"Anders was connected with no crimes other than those he has confessed," Hoover said.

Hoover listed the confessed crimes as:
1. The kidnaping and killing of Ross, wealthy retired Chicago greeting card manufacturer, for whom $50,000 ransom was paid.
2. The "warm-up" kidnaping Sept. 2 of Olivia Borgia, 20, wife of a Chicago race track bookmaker, near Lake Geneva, Wis. She was released without a ransom payment.

3. A series of bank robberies in 1936 and 1937 in various parts of the country.
In a press conference recapitulation of kidnaping crimes in the United States, Hoover listed as still unsolved the abduction of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, Tacoma, Wash., and Arthur Fried, White Plains, N. Y. The Mattson boy was killed by his kidnaper.

Not in Mattson Case
Hoover's statement absolved Anders, who constructed two grave-like dugouts in Minnesota and Wisconsin northwest woods (Continued on Page Eight)

IN THIS shallow wood frame dugout, implanted level with the earth 12 miles northwest of Spooner, Wis., federal agents found the bodies of Charles S. Ross, wealthy Chicagoan abducted and slain, and James Gray, slain accomplice in the abduction. The G-men were led to the spot by Peter Anders, confessed abductor-slayer of the two men. Federal agents, under J. Edgar Hoover, also announced that $30,000 of the $50,000 ransom money had been recovered.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 22—(UP)—A jury verdict finding five of six defendants guilty of conspiring to defraud the U. S. government on a Mound City state park WPA project in Ross county today marked the close in federal district court of the first such trial in Ohio.

A jury of 23 men deliberated nearly four hours and returned a verdict acquitting William Stauderman, 46, former WPA time-keeper, and convicting five others.

Those found guilty were Henry C. Wallenhorst, Cincinnati, former WPA engineer; John Mossbarger, Clarksburg automobile dealer, Jerry Dennis, Wilmington, former WPA general superintendent; Roy Sampson, superintendent of the Mound City memorial park, and Harvey G. ## JURY PROBES 'CONFESSIONS'

Harrison Countians Called to Investigate Stories of Conn Death, Baumgardner Abduction as Told by Prisoner

CADIZ, Jan. 22—(UP)—A special session of the Harrison county grand jury was called today to determine whether authorities have sufficient evidence to warrant indictments against four men in connection with the murder of State Highway Patrolman George Conn near Freeport, O., last Sept. 28.

Also being investigated were purported "confessions" indicating that the four men may have had some connection with the disappearance of Ruth Baumgardner, Ohio Wesleyan university co-ed, last May 5.

The men held for questioning in connection with the two unsolved cases are Booker Johnson, 46, Negro, held at St. Clairsville; Charles Ford, 20; Negro; Bernardo Masullo, 24, and Peter Soreno, 21, all held in Pittsburgh.

Col. Lynn Black, superintendent of the Ohio highway patrol, said at Columbus that he put little credence in purported confessions of Johnson and Ford to the murder of Conn and the kidnaping of Miss Baumgardner.

"Confess to Anything"
"They are the kind of men who would confess to anything," Col. Black said.

Sheriff M. F. Pinney and Prosecutor H. Lloyd Jones of Delaware county were expected to come here to investigate the Baumgardner kidnaping story.

The arrest of Johnson at St. Clairsville several weeks ago led to the investigation of both cases. His statements led to questioning of the others. Johnson was said to have told a cellmate he "knew something" about the Baumgardner case.

Deputy Sheriff Joseph Zeik of St. Clairsville was quoted as saying that Johnson told him Miss Baumgardner, whose home was in Lake- (Continued on Page Eight)

IRREGULAR UNITS CLAIM VICTORIES OVER JAPANESE

SHANGHAI, Jan. 22—(UP)—Chinese guerrilla units claimed today to have defeated the Japanese in the Pootung area, west of Shanghai.

Although direct communication with Pootung was out of the question—the Japanese have cut off telegraph and telephone lines and would not permit the landing of boats at the Pootung bend—Chinese reports asserted that fighting continued.

According to these reports, the guerrilla units attacked in force around Nanhushien and Fengshin. Both are within a radius of 20 miles from the center of Shanghai. The Chinese were said to have "disarmed" 300 Japanese soldiers. The guerrilla units last week captured 270 Japanese prisoners in the area around Chuanhsia, about 14 miles west of Shanghai across the Whangpoo river.

Cloudy and colder weather was forecast for late Saturday.

BRITISH ACT RECALLED

Strict Observance of All Obligations Asked

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—(UP)—Federal legislation imposing obligations on organized labor, which in some degree would balance advantages given workers in the last six years, was foreshadowed today as part of President Roosevelt's program of national economic cooperation.

Businessmen in their conferences with Mr. Roosevelt evidently are urging legislation to counterbalance the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act of 1932 and the Wagner Labor Relations act of 1936. Mr. Roosevelt yesterday counseled his press conference questioners to study the 1927 British trades disputes and trades unions act. He said everyone, evidently meaning labor as well as capital, should study that legislation although he explained he was not committing himself to acceptance of that method of dealing with the problem.

The British act was born of the British general strike which briefly in 1926 brought that country to the brink of civil war.

Strikes Prohibited

"The new legislation," says a digest of the act prepared by editorial reports, "prohibited general or sympathetic strikes by providing that a strike, or lockout, should be illegal if the object was other than in furtherance of a trade dispute in the industry in which the strikers were engaged, or if its object was to coerce the government directly or by inflicting hardship on the community."

"Penalties were provided for persons responsible for violations of this section, and union funds were made liable for damages suffered by employers in the course of an illegal strike. Picketing was declared illegal if conducted in such numbers or in such manner that it was likely to intimidate workers or cause any disturbance."

Both the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization are attempting to organize federal employees, a procedure which would be forbidden under terms of the statute. The provisions governing (Continued on Page Eight)

MRS. ROOSEVELT MAY HAVE HER HAIR CUT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—(UP)—Friends of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today that she is considering shattering White House tradition and bobbing her hair.

The first lady, it was disclosed, already has had her hair trimmed at the sides to enable her to have it waved. Later, her friends believed, she may have it completely bobbed.

No first lady ever has worn bobbed hair. Although Mrs. Roosevelt's coiffure was changed slightly by the shorter hair on the sides, she still wears her hair in her customary fashion—with a knot at the nape of the neck.

Utilities to Carry T. V. A. Ruling to Supreme Court

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 22—(UP)—Attorneys representing the Tennessee Valley authority and private utility interests planned today to have the United States supreme court rule on the special district court opinion which upheld the constitutionality of the federal government's $500,000,000 electrical "yardstick" agency.

Spokesmen for the Commonwealth and Southern corporation, whose president, Wendell L. Willkie, had suggested that the government purchase private utility properties in the T. V. A. area, announced that the highest tribunal would be asked to reverse the decision of the three-judge district court.

James L. Fly, general counsel for the federal agency, declared that he would "take whatever steps necessary to get this case heard and disposed of by the supreme court this term."

Thirty days are allowed for filing notice of appeal, and 60 days more for preparation before presentation of the appeal. If the maximum time were taken by the utilities, the supreme court would receive the appeal late in April. The court ordinarily hears its last arguments early in May before adjourning for its Summer recess about June 1.

Fly said that he would ask the court to fix a minimum time for preparation of briefs after the filing of appeal. The T. V. A., he said, power companies have given notice is eager to have the case reviewed and the issues finally settled before Summer.

Eighteen southeastern utilities, led by the giant Commonwealth and Southern corporation, brought the suit that resulted in the special court's unanimous decision yesterday. They had charged that the

Hawaii-Bound Ship Turns Around After Traveling Far Over Ocean

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22—(UP)—The China Clipper made an emergency landing here at 9:35 a. m. after turning back because of mechanical trouble while 700 miles out to sea on a flight from California to Honolulu.

The huge flying boat, carrying eight passengers and a crew of seven, winged in from over the sea just after sunrise, circled the harbor, and swooped down over the masts of a navy cruiser to settle down smoothly on the quiet water off Reeves field.

The Clipper landed at Los Angeles harbor instead of at its Alameda base because of reports of a heavy fog at the bay city.

Capt. J. H. Tilton reported that he was unable to pump gasoline from a wing tank holding 700 gallons and that the remaining supply would not have been enough to reach Honolulu. PROBERS LISTEN TO CHARGE OHIO RAIDS "DUMMIES"

COLUMBUS, Jan. 22—(UP)—Evidence that state liquor inspectors reported liquor raids that never were made and turned in expense accounts for such imaginary raids was before the Ohio senate graft investigating committee today.

At a long hearing, the committee was told:

That Cleveland liquor inspectors reported to the state liquor department that they raided bootlegging places and made arrests after these places had been raided by federal liquor agents.

That on several occasions, persons reported arrested actually never were apprehended.

That one inspector said he purchased illegal liquor from a bootlegger, who actually was in jail on a federal charge.

That liquor inspectors filed expense accounts for "buys" of illegal liquor, although no purchases were made.

S. M. Bowes, Cleveland, investigator for the federal alcohol tax unit, testified that his division had made raids and arrests in several cases where credit was claimed by state agents.

Utilities to Carry T. V. A. Ruling to Supreme Court

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 22—(UP)—Attorneys representing the Tennessee Valley authority and private utility interests planned today to have the United States supreme court rule on the special district court opinion which upheld the constitutionality of the federal government's $500,000,000 electrical "yardstick" agency.

Spokesmen for the Commonwealth and Southern corporation, whose president, Wendell L. Wilkie, had suggested that the government purchase private utility properties in the T. V. A. area, announced that the highest tribunal would be asked to reverse the decision of the three-judge district court.

James L. Fly, general counsel for the federal agency, declared that he would "take whatever steps necessary to get this case heard and disposed of by the supreme court this term."

Thirty days are allowed for filing notice of appeal, and 60 days more for preparation before presentation of the appeal. If the maximum time were taken by the utilities, the supreme court would receive the appeal late in April. The court ordinarily hears its last arguments early in May before adjourning for its summer recess about June 1.

Fly said that he would ask the court to fix a minimum time for preparation of briefs after the filing of appeal. The T. V. A., he said, power companies have given notice is easier to have the case reviewed and the issues finally settled before summer.

Eighteen southeastern utilities, led by the giant Commonwealth and Southern corporation, brought the suit that resulted in the special court's unanimous decision yesterday. They had charged that the (Continued on Page Eight)

TIGERS TURN BACK WEST JEFFERSON, 27-23, FOR SECOND VICTORY OF WEEK

ROUGH CONTEST LEAVES LOCALS ON LONG END

DAVIS AND SMITH SCORE

Foul Line Accuracy Gives Red and Black Edge

Circleville high school cagers won their second court game on the C. A. C. floor in a week, Friday evening, from a rough and scrapping West Jefferson varsity. The score was 27-23. Tuesday evening Ashville fell before the locals.

The invaders out-field goaled the Tigers with 10 against seven, but the locals took advantage of their free toss opportunities to outgain the "Jeffs" 13 to 3 from this line.

The Red and Black team was ahead from the start, but its margin was never safe enough to call comfortable. The first period closed 7-4, the half ended 14-11, and the third period, 19-18.

West Jefferson, led by Cornwell, a tall darkhaired sophomore, put up a real battle, but didn't have the stuff to stop the Tigers. Personal fouls were attempted in an effort to halt the Tiger shooters, but the personal contact acted with reverse English. Linn, West Jefferson center, went out on fouls. Two other invaders had three called against them.

Whitey Davis and Kenny Smith led the Tiger scorers with 10 and nine points, respectively. Cornwell topped all the players with 14 tallied on seven shots, all from directly under the net.

The Tiger reserves with Bill Heffner and Harold Smith setting a fast pace turned back West Jefferson 24-20.

Smith did most of the first half scoring, but was stopped during the last two cantos, during which time Heffner took up the burden.

An earlier preliminary saw the Circleville eighth grade on the long end of a 20-13 score over Stoutsville. Bob Moon with 10 points led the locals.

JERSEY FIGHTER GAINS DECISION OVER TOM FARR

Welshman Surprised After Two to One Vote Gives Ex-Champ Victory

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—(UP)—A ring plot so fantastic that no dramatist would dare write it sped toward reality today as former Champion Jim Braddock, victor over Tommy Farr of Wales in last night's Garden fight, looked ahead to a possible second triumph over Maxie Baer and another shot at the world's heavyweight boxing title.

Jersey Jim, the ring's "cinderella man," who played a rags-to-riches role in moving from a relief roster to the royal purple and gold of the world's championship, scored one of the biggest upsets of recent boxing history by outpointing the 24-year-old Welsh coal miner in their 10-round bout. A 2-1 underdog in the final betting, Braddock staged a perfectly gauged fight to close with a rush and win the nod from two of the three officials. The outcome was almost as unexpected as the upset win over Baer which made, Jimmy, a 1-8 underdog in the betting, the champ three years ago.

Braddock started fast and closed fast. He won the first two listless rounds. Although outpointed, he won the third on a foul. The fourth went to Farr. So did the next four, and it seemed at this point that Braddock would be called on to make good his promise to quit if he lost.

Then the 32-year-old Jersey Irishman really began to fight. He opened the ninth with a left to the body and a right to the head. Cool while the angered Welshman swung wildly, Braddock followed with body blows that brought the crowd to its feet. In full command Braddock swarmed all over Farr to win the round by a wide margin.

More of the same in the tenth. Braddock waited for an opening and then landed a left to the head and followed with a jolting right to the jaw. The crowd screamed. Farr dove into Braddock but did not land and Jimmy sent the coal miner back on his heels with a right to the face, and followed with an overhand smash to the head to close out the round and the fight.

Hand Refused

Then came the decision. There must have been many spectators who thought Farr had won it or that a draw would have been a proper verdict. But if they cried their disapproval they were drowned out by the acclaim for the popular Irishman and in the boing which was accorded Farr when he refused to accept Jim's hand after the announcement was made.

Later Farr insisted that he did not know that Braddock had offered his hand.

"I was too dumbfounded over the decision to know anything," Farr said in his dressing room. "I really thought I had won. I'd like another chance with him, but anyway I can always go back to the mines to make a living."

Most surprising post-fight utterance was that of Joe Gould, dapper manager of the former champ.

"No we won't fight Baer," he said. "To fight him would be a backward step. We beat him once.

"Don't worry," said Mike Jacobs, "Braddock will fight Baer. There's no contract but there is an agreement. It's been understood all along that the winner would fight Baer on March 11."

Not all of the fighting occurred in the ring. There were a couple of melees involving New York sportswriters before the main show went on, and another incident one in Farr's dressing room when an English reporter sought to prevent Tommy talking to New York writers.

Braddock carried two good-luck tokens with him. One was a golden horseshoe supposedly made by former Champion Bob Fitzsimmons. Presented to Braddock by John "Jafsie" Condon of Lindbergh-kidnap fame, it was carried to ringside in Jim's water bucket. In Braddock's dressing robe pocket was a rabbit's foot.

There were no knockdowns and neither man was noticeably marked.

Braddock weighed 199½, Farr, 207.

CAPITAL U. AND WOOSTER HOLD COURT CONTEST

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 22—(UP)

—Two teams and a pair of individual performers monopolize the attention directed at 13 games on tonight's college basketball schedule in the state.

The teams are Capital and Wooster, bitter rivals for the lead in the Ohio conference race. The individual combatants in the spotlight are the state's two outstanding scorers, Nick Frascella of Wooster; and "Chuck" Chukovits of the University of Toledo.

Capital, the state's only undefeated team seeks its seven straight conference triumph when it entertains Otterbein here. Wooster, unbeaten in three league engagements, tangles with Oberlin at Oberlin.

Capital, while eyeing the conference title, has more than championship hopes back of its desire to beat Otterbein. The Columbus school has not been able to down an Otterbein quintet in six years, but is favored to break the jinx tonight.

Wooster is the top-heavy choice over Oberlin. Frascella's individual showing far overshadows that of the team. Coach Walter G. Hargeshelmer of Oberlin has announced he will make no special attempt to bottle up the Scots' ace, but instead will order his players to concentrate their defensive maneuvers to halt the remainder of the Wooster team.

FARR'S DEFEAT PROVES TRAGEDY IN WELSH TOWN

TONYPANDY, Wales, Jan. 22—

(UP)—Tommy Farr's defeat at the hands of former Champion Jimmy Braddock was a tragedy to his home town. Women wept openly in the streets early this morning, and miners shook their heads sorrowfully as they descended into the black pits where Tommy once dug coal.

Most of Tonymandy's population arose early to listen to the radio account of the fight. Lights shown in windows throughout the town as groups gathered about loud-speakers.

As soon as it was over everyone filed into the streets to discuss it. Nor was the weeping confined to women; grizzled coal miners brushed back tears.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH CONVENTION TO START JAN. 25 IN SPRINGFIELD, OHIO

St. Philip's Delegation To Attend

Episcopal church members from the Circleville area will be among the hundreds in attendance at annual diocesan convention of the Episcopal Church in southern Ohio at Christ Church, Springfield, Jan. 25 and 26.

Special emphasis is to be given at this convention to the church's rural work program, in southern Ohio. St. Paul's Wayside Cathedral, the mobile unit which Bishop Henry W. Hobson, head of the diocese of southern Ohio, is using in his rural program, will be at the convention.

Southern Ohio parishes and missions elect lay delegates to the convention. In addition, many visitors attend the sessions.

The missionary service, the evening of Jan. 25, will be one of the most interesting of the services. The speaker will be President Francis C. M. Wei of Central China college.

Dr. Wei is one of the outstanding Christian leaders in the Orient. He has been president of the Central China college since 1929. He is a noted author.

A report of the southern Ohio offerings for the China relief fund will be presented at the Missionary Service. Bishop Hobson appealed Christmas for funds to aid suffering churchmen in China.

UNITED BRETHREN YOUNG FOLK TO GATHER SUNDAY

All young folk of the First United Brethren church and Sunday school are invited to a special meeting to be held Sunday at 6:30 p. m. A discussion will be conducted on the subject "Ways and Means of Enlarging Our Young People's Work."

All members of the choir are asked to be present Wednesday evening for a rehearsal to be held following the prayer meeting.

The Rev. T. C. Harper's sermon subjects will be "Whence Shall We Buy Bread," and "Daring Faith," at the morning and evening services, respectively, Sunday.

Ministering to Physical Needs

Coming into the house of Simon they told Jesus of Simon's wife's mother who was seriously ill of fever. Jesus stood at her bed and rebuked the fever and the woman was healed at once.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Mark 1:29-45.

At sunset a great crowd gathered before the house where Jesus was staying. They came bearing all manner of sick and afflicted folk whom Jesus healed by the touch of his hand.

Where Jesus received such authority for teaching and healing was learned by his disciples next morning before daylight when they found him out in a lonely spot praying to his Father for strength.

When a leper said to Jesus, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean," Jesus replied, "I will, be thou clean," and the leper was cleansed. (GOLDEN TEXT—Mark 1:34.)

Mark 1:34—"And he healed many that were sick."

Ministering to Physical Needs

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY DR. ALVIN E. BELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 23 is Mark 1:29-45, the Golden Text being, Mark 1:34, "And he healed many that were sick.")

IT IS NEVER far from the place of divine worship to the place of service to our fellow-men. So our lesson opens: "And straightaway, when they were come out of the synagogue, they came into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. Now Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever; and he came and took her by the hand, and raised her up; and the fever left her, and she ministered unto them." Are we telling the Good Physician of our sick and bringing him to them as did these early followers of our Lord? How promptly and effectively the Lord responds to such appeals of human need: "They tell him of her; and he came, and took her by the hand, and raised her up."

Authority Over Disease

In last Sunday's lesson there was displayed Jesus' authority in the realm of doctrine: "They were astonished at his doctrine; for he taught them as one that had authority." His authority even extended to the realm of demons: "For with authority," they said, "he commandeth even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him." Again he asserts his authority, this time in the realm of disease. Luke the physician tells us that it was "a great fever" with which Simon's wife's mother "was holden", and that Jesus "stood over her and rebuked the fever; and it left her." And the word Luke used here for "rebuked" is the same word he used to describe Jesus' exercise of authority over the evil spirit. This authority of Jesus in the realm of disease was displayed on a wider scale at sunset of that busy day, when "they brought unto him all that were sick, and them that were possessed with demons. And all the city was gathered together at the door. And he healed many that were sick with divers diseases, and cast out many demons; and he suffered not the demons to speak, because they knew him."

Source of Authority

Jesus, walking among the rows of sick and afflicted brought to his door that evening, is the picture of the Good Physician meeting perfectly a dying world's every need. That sunset marked "the end of a perfect day." How that day and every day of the Good Physician's busy life began, are told us next: "In the morning, a great while before day, he rose up and went out, and departed into a desert place, and there prayed." When his disciples found him, and gently chided him for this, as it must have seemed to them, waste of time from a busy day, saying, "All are seeking thee," he replied, "Let us go elsewhere into the next towns, that I may preach there also; for to this end came I forth." As much as to say, "I know it is to be a busy day, therefore I came forth here to pray." Prayer time is by no means wasted time; to take time to pray is to save time for work and to multiply strength for work. The authority Jesus exercised in every realm was purchased by prayer. Our lack of it is explained in the words, "Ye have not because ye ask not. Yet ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss."

EPISCOPAL CHURCH CONVENTION TO START JAN. 25 IN SPRINGFIELD, OHIO

St. Philip's Delegation To Attend

Episcopal church members from the Circleville area will be among the hundreds in attendance at annual diocesan convention of the Episcopal Church in southern Ohio at Christ Church, Springfield, Jan. 25 and 26.

Special emphasis is to be given at this convention to the church's rural work program, in southern Ohio. St. Paul's Wayside Cathedral, the mobile unit which Bishop Henry W. Hobson, head of the diocese of southern Ohio, is using in his rural program, will be at the convention.

Southern Ohio parishes and missions elect lay delegates to the convention. In addition, many visitors attend the sessions.

The missionary service, the evening of Jan. 25, will be one of the most interesting of the services. The speaker will be President Francis C. M. Wel of Central China college.

Dr. Wei is one of the outstanding Christian leaders in the Orient. He has been president of the Central China college since 1929. He is a noted author.

A report of the southern Ohio offerings for the China relief fund will be presented at the Missionary Service. Bishop Hobson appealed Christmas for funds to aid suffering churchmen in China.

Delegates of the Circleville church to the convention are James Swearingen, Harry Johnson, Mrs. William Burns, and Mrs. Mary Spangler, and alternates are Russell Imler, Charles Roof, Miss Emma Mader, and Mrs. Frank Davis.

Ministering to Physical Needs

Coming into the house of Simon they told Jesus of Simon's wife's mother who was seriously ill of fever. Jesus stood at her bed and rebuked the fever and the woman was healed at once.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Mark 1:29-45.

At sunset a great crowd gathered before the house where Jesus was staying. They came bearing all manner of sick and afflicted folk whom Jesus healed by the touch of his hand.

Where Jesus received such authority for teaching and healing was learned by his disciples next morning before daylight when they found him out in a lonely spot praying to his Father for strength.

When a leper said to Jesus, "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean," Jesus replied, "I will, be thou clean," and the leper was cleansed. (GOLDEN TEXT—Mark 1:34.)

Mark 1:34—"And he healed many that were sick."

Ministering to Physical Needs

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

BY DR. ALVIN E. BELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 23 is Mark 1:29-45, the Golden Text being, Mark 1:34, "And he healed many that were sick.")

IT IS NEVER far from the place of divine worship to the place of service to our fellow-men. So our lesson opens: "And straightway, when they were come out of the synagogue, they came into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. Now Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever; and straightway they tell him of her; and he came and took her by the hand, and raised her up; and the fever left her, and she ministered unto them." Are we telling the Good Physician of our sick and bringing him to them as did these early followers of our Lord? How promptly and effectively the Lord responds to such appeals of human need: "They tell him of her; and he came, and took her by the hand, and raised her up."

Authority Over Disease

In last Sunday's lesson there was displayed Jesus' authority in the realm of doctrine: "They were astonished at his doctrine; for he taught them as one that had authority." His authority even extended to the realm of demons: "For with authority," they said, "he commandeth even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him." Again he asserts his authority, this time in the realm of disease. Luke the physician tells us that it was "a great fever" with which Simon's wife's mother "was holden," and that Jesus "stood over her and rebuked the fever; and it left her." And the word Luke used here for "rebuked" is the same word he used to describe Jesus' exercise of authority over the evil spirit. This authority of Jesus in the realm of disease was displayed on a wider scale at sunset of that busy day, when "they brought unto him all that were sick, and them that were possessed with demons. And all the city was gathered together at the door. And he healed many that were sick with diverse diseases, and cast out many demons; and he suffered not the demons to speak, because they knew him."

As much as to say, "I know it is to be a busy day, therefore I came forth here to pray." Prayer time is by no means wasted time; to take time to pray is to save time for work and to multiply strength for work. The authority Jesus exercised in every realm was purchased by prayer. ### HEMISPHERIC HIGHWAY

A CONVENTION of the American Highway Road Builders' Association brings good news to motor tourists. In five or six years, reports the Pan-American division, we'll be able to drive from our garages to the Panama Canal over modern highways.

In twice that time the road to Panama will be linked with South American units carrying the continental trunk line to Buenos Aires.

Americans who toured in Mexico last summer found the highways good to Mexico City. Work is now under way in Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua, Salvador and Panama. Every year the long, open road will lengthen. It will be a fine adventure, in 15 or 20 years, to go rolling from Alaska or Hudson Bay down to Tierra del Fuego.

CASH-AND-CARRY STATE

IT doesn't seem as if there could be any state like Nebraska. It has no income tax, no sales tax and no cigarette tax. Still, more incredible, it has no public debt. It even has a fine new $10,000,000 state house all paid for.

Nebraska has written thrift into its fundamental law. There are both constitutional and statutory limitations upon spending by the legislature and by local subdivisions of government. The main defense against extravagance is the pay-as-you-go plan for all state expenditure. It not only saves money directly, but continually suggests thrift in every phase of public life.

Such expenses as the state does incur are paid mainly from three sources—property taxes, gasoline taxes and liquor taxes.

An agricultural state naturally can live more thriftily than one largely industrial. Still, the industrial states could get some useful ideas from Nebraska.

INEFFECTIVE SUN BATHS

THE human tendency to go to extremes makes a lot of people lose the beneficial effects of sunlight in this sun-bathing age. They have more enthusiasm than judgment. Many get themselves badly burned. Others take large doses of sunlight as fast as they can without burning, and soon develop a deep coat of tan which prevents the body from deriving any further benefit from the sun's rays. Still others apply special oils to prevent sunburn, preventing the good effects along with the bad.

Doctors have told the public these things before. Warnings are issued every year about sunburn, sunstroke and heat prostration. A biochemist now adds his word to the warnings already given. Scientific tests he has made prove the sun-resisting effects of deep tan. Don't get as bronzed as an Indian if you want to make the most of the sun's healthful rays.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

Up at the usual hour, finding the world drizzle. Soon out in the rain and to the post, where did find a letter from Doc Bales, who is shell hunting in Mexico. An interesting letter; so interesting in fact that it is reproduced here:

"Thought I would drop you a line to express my appreciation of the Herald. It comes regularly and it is surprising how few issues come up missing when you consider that it has to travel 2600 miles. It is just like a friend saying, 'Hello Doc' when I get it from the P. O., and by the way, this town of about 12,000 has but fifty private boxes in the P. O. The weather here, for me, is ideal—just like August weather at home, with the exception that there is no rain. Once in a while a day is partially cloudy for a short while, but the sun soon comes out. We are located just a mile from town and our cottage is set in the midst of a cocconut grove at the top of a hill and there is always a breeze. Just over the hill and down again, is a fine bathing beach and we do not have to walk more than the distance of across the street and back again to reach the beach. The Pacific Ocean has surely been misnamed; it is anything but peaceful and as this locality has a very rocky coast line, the waves are plenty high.

"Much of my collecting of marine shells is done with the aid of a water glass and diving water goggles, as the shellfish are usually seen on and under the rocks. I first locate the shell with the water glass and then dive for it. The goggles keep the salt water out of my eyes and I can see under water as plainly as if there were no water at all. A friend gave them to me—he got them from Japan. They cover the eyes and nose and surely are the real thing. All manner of beautiful fish can be seen when I am under the water, and I can look them right in the eye. Saw a very pretty one yesterday. It was not much larger than a minnow—black, marked with a number of perpendicular stripes of white and the dorsal or top fin was bright scarlet. There are many blue fishes in all sizes and one particularly beautiful fish that is blue above and bright yellow beneath—also angel fish, parrot fish and what have you. A friend of mine here went fishing after sail fish with a party of veteran anglers and caught a sail fish that was more than nine feet long and weighed 174 pounds. He had never seen sail fishing before and his companions did not get a strike and were their faces red.

"We expect to remain here for at least another month before we start the long trek homeward. It's a hard drive among the mountains and when I say mountains, I don't mean anything else. The road for many miles just clings to the side of the mountains and is full of hair pin curves, horse shoe bends and in many places a snake would break its back trying to follow the curves, but the trip was worth any hardships. We find the Mexican people as a whole very likeable people; it is true there is much poverty, but they take it with a sort of calm resignation and put off everything until manana.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

A. A. BERLE ON WAY BACK

WASHINGTON—The original Roosevelt Brain Trust has been absent from Washington ever since Professor Tugwell's resignation, but it now looks as if one of them were coming back. He is Adolf Berle, member of Mayor La Guardia's cabinet, one of an advisory group of the New York Stock Exchange, and the man who has written some of Roosevelt's most radical speeches.

Berle has been offered the job of Assistant Secretary of State, the desk held by Professor Moley when he headed the Brain Trust in the early carefree, debonair days of the New Deal.

Strange thing is that Berle once rated about as low with Secretary Hull as did Professor Moley—whom Hull fired. Hull and Berle were shipmates together en route to the Buenos Aires Conference, and on the trip Berle high-hatted his chief, acted as if he, not the Secretary of State, were running the show.

Hull has changed now, is able to take Berle, but Berle has not changed. He is still the most egotistical young man in any part of the far-flung New Deal.

GHOST-WRITER

The other night in New York, Berle was discussing with friends a speech made by Fiorello La Guardia the night before. Berle had been absent in Albany, but learned from his friends that the speech had gone sour.

"How do you explain that?" someone asked.

"Well," shot back Berle, "I can't be in New York and Albany at the same time."

Later the same evening, the young Brain Trust got a telephone call from Washington. He put his hands behind his back and paced the floor, complaining:

"I wish Washington would let me alone. A man's got to have some time to himself. And every evening when I settle down after dinner, they keep telephoning me. I wish they'd manage their own affairs. They can't expect me to get them out of every scrape they get into."

MAE WEST SPANKING

The official spanking given Mae West and NBC for her racy "Garden of Eden" broadcast bore the unanimous approval of the Federal Communications Commission, but privately the Commissioners were not unanimous.

Behind the scenes, some of them weren't keen on spanking either the lady or the broadcasting company. Norman Case, ex-Governor of Rhode Island, and a good Baptist, was the chief dissenter.

However, Chairman McNinch put his stiff reprimand across by preparing it privately, then showing it in advance to Commissioner Payne. Later, when the full FCC met, these two progressives stampeded its adoption.

SECRET NAVAL MOVEMENTS

The strict censorship which the Navy is clamping down on news pertains chiefly to ship movements. In the future there will be no announcements when vessels are dispatched, or where.

This gives the Navy considerably more freedom in maneuvering vessels around the Pacific without arousing the Japanese or what may be more important—getting the American public in a dither.

DIET AND HEALTH

Antitoxins Now Used To Modify the Measles

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

LAST WEEK we spoke of new studies that have been made in the subject of mumps. This week I find an article in a current medical magazine on control of another infectious disease—measles.

Measles, like mumps, is not nearly as innocent as parents are sometimes inclined to believe. There is a definite death rate, but it is comforting to know that it has been steadily declining. In Massachusetts, for instance, in the year 1920, the death rate for measles was 9.1; in 1936 it was 0.8. This has been due probably more to intelligent isolation and quarantine of cases by parents than to any public health measures. There used to be an idea that children should have measles and get it over with, but that is not necessarily true.

The reduction in the incidence of nutritional disorders and deficiency diseases in children, together with improvement in housing conditions, has reduced the number of chronically ill and debilitated children in whom measles found many of its victims. Besides that, it is possible now to protect children in the face of an epidemic with various kinds of sera.

Antitoxins Used in Measles

Antitoxins against measles are found in the blood of almost all patients who have recovered from the disease, and intramuscular injections of such blood can be given to those who have had contact with a case of measles and show a considerable reduction in incidence. If given during the incubation period—that is, during the ten days after contact—it protects against an attack during the first of these five days, and modifies the attack during the second five days, and even in the eruptive stage it may have a diminishing effect on the severity of the disease.

Protection by the use of human immune bodies is of short duration, lasting only a few weeks, and is of particular advantage when used in institutions, or for acutely or chronically ill, debilitated or very young children.

A CASE FOR 3 DETECTIVES

By LEO BRUCE
COPYRIGHT BY LEO BRUCE, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:
Mrs. Mary Thurston, middle-aged wife of a retired English physician, is found murdered in bed during a weekend party at the Thurston home near London. Those in the house when Mrs. Thurston retired are her husband; Townsend, the author; Williams, the family lawyer; Strickland, a sportsman, and the servants. They find her a few seconds after three piercing screams had penetrated the house. No one else is found in the bedroom. The door was bolted from the inside and the only open window revealed a 20-foot drop to the ground. Below the bedroom window, Townsend finds the murder weapon, a bloodstained Chinese knife, taken from the Thurston hallway. Shortly afterwards, Mr. Rider, the vicar, a dinner guest that evening, is found praying beside Mrs. Thurston's body.
(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 8

"WHAT I don't understand," said Williams, "is how Rider came to be beside Mary Thurston's bed, within half an hour of the murder. He left to go home long before 11, and the vicarage is only just across the orchard."

"Could anyone have telephoned to him?" asked Strickland.
"Impossible. The telephone's out of order. Wires cut, probably."

"Then he can never have gone home," I said.

Williams rang the bell. "We'll ask Stall," he said. "Rider told us that he let him in."

The butler came. But I felt at once, looking at him, that he was on his guard. He glanced from one to another of us, as though wondering whence the attack would come.

"Oh, Stall," said Williams, "did you see Mr. Rider out?"
"On which occasion, sir? When he first left the house, before Mrs. Thurston had retired, I saw him out."

"I see. When did he return?"
"It must have been 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour after . . . the discovery, sir."

"For whom did he ask?"
"For Dr. Thurston, sir."

"And did you show him into the lounge?"

"No, sir. It was just then that the parlor-maid was took 'ysterical, sir. Very 'ysterical, she was. And I was 'urrying back to the kitchen. I left Mr. Rider to go into the lounge himself. I did not see him again, sir."

"He said nothing to you beyond asking for Dr. Thurston?"

"No, sir. Nothing. But he seemed agitated, sir."

"I see. You go to his church, don't you, Stall?"

"Yes, sir. I sing in the choir. Bass, sir."

"Thank you, Stall. You'd better get to bed now."

When the door was closed we exchanged glances, as though each wanted to see what the others thought of it.

"Extraordinary—about Rider," I said after a moment. But no one answered. So much was extraordinary. And so very extraordinary.

Leaving back in my chair I began considering each of the men who were in that room separately, as a possible murderer. It was not a pleasant occupation, for there was not one of them to whom I wished evil, or whom I had hitherto really disliked. But as each one presented himself to my doubt, I was faced again and again by the same blank wall. How had he got out? Those two bolts—I had pulled them back myself. Whoever had done it, if natural laws existed still, had left that room during the few moments it had taken us to run upstairs and break down the door. But how? How? I felt as though the doubt would lead me to madness. There was no way out of that room.

At last we decided to turn in. But when we were standing, waiting for someone to lead the way out of the room, young Strickland, who was standing beside him, handed me a cigar of superlative quality, and invited me to "spill the beans." This I did at some length. I told him in detail the sportsman, said a rather tactless thing to Alec Norris, the novelist.

He handed me a cigar of superlative quality.

"Well," he said, "it seems that already your theory about murder has been proved to be wrong."

I had forgotten all about that conversation over the cocktails. The recollection gave me a start. But the effect of the remark on Norris was quite unexpected. He answered in a high-pitched voice, shrill with hysteria.

"Yes," he said, "I must have been wrong!" And he began to utter a laugh, which was low at first, grew louder and higher, until Dr. Tate, who was standing beside him, struck him across the mouth.

Norris stopped at once. "I'm sorry," he said.

"I'm sorry, too," said Dr. Tate. "But it's the only thing to do with hysteria. Couldn't have you waking the household. It's long past midnight."

Quite early the next morning those indefatigably brilliant private investigators, who seem to be always handy when a murder has been committed, began to arrive.

I had some knowledge of their habits, and guessed at once what had happened to bring them there. One had probably been staying in the district, another was a friend of Dr. Tate's, while a third, perhaps, had already been asked to stay with the Thurstons. At any rate, it was not long before the house seemed to be alive with them, crawling about on floors, applying lenses to the paintwork, and asking the servants the most unexpected questions.

The first on the scene was Lord Simon Pimlico. He stepped out of the foremost of three Rolls-Royces, the second of which contained his man-servant, whose name I afterwards learned was Butterfield, and the third, a quantity of photographic apparatus. I happened to be outside the front door at the time, and heard him address his man. I was at first a little startled at his idiom, for it reminded me of a dialogue I had heard in a cabaret between two entertainers whose name I believe was Western, and it took me a few moments to believe that this was his natural mode of speech.

He handed me a cigar of superlative quality, and invited me to "spill the beans." This I did at some length. I told him in detail of the incredible mystery which confronted us, and the insoluble problem of the murderer's way of escape. When I had finished, he sighed.

"Another of these locked door cases," he said with palpable ennui. "I was hopin' it might be something new, what?"

But he came into the lounge, and glanced about him. "You say it happened in the room above this one. No footprints outside, I suppose?"

"No," I said, pleased that I had shown enough professional acumen to have looked for them last night. Then I led him to the scene of my search. He glanced cursorily at the shattered light bulb, and noted the place in which I had found the knife, stepping back to glance upward at the window. Then he stooped to examine the flower bed, but without disarranging the crease in his beautifully cut trousers. Finally he stepped back again, and remained quite motionless, staring up at the windows above him.

As he did so I examined this young man. I had heard of him first some 10 years ago, and was surprised to find now that he appeared no older. But perhaps among other secrets he had discovered that of changeless youth. The length of his chin, like most other things about him, was excessive. But I liked him, because from the moment he arrived at that house the somewhat macabre atmosphere of the previous evening was dissipated. His cheerful and inquisitive nature seemed to discourage any morbid dwelling on the horror of Mary Thurston's death, and to induce everyone, whether bereaved or guilty, into a pleasant and eager state of curiosity.

I know that for my part from the time when I met Lord Simon I ceased to remember the ghastly moment when we had first looked into that locked bedroom—I even forgot more than a perfunctory duty of mourning. I became wholly absorbed in the fascinating problem which confronted us. And I have gathered that this is the experience of most people intimately connected with a murder which a first-rate private detective or criminologist is investigating.

The other night in New York, Berle was discussing with friends a speech made by Fiorello La Guardia the night before. Berle had been absent in Albany, but learned from his friends that the speech had gone sour.

"How do you explain that?" someone asked.

"Well," shot back Berle, "I can't be in New York and Albany at the same time."

Later the same evening, the young Brain Truster got a telephone call from Washington. He put his hands behind his back and paced the floor, complaining: "I wish Washington would let me alone. A man's got to have some time to himself. And every evening when I settle down after dinner, they keep telephoning me. I wish they'd manage their own affairs. They can't expect me to get them out of every scrape they get into."

MAE WEST SPANKING

The official spanking given Mae West and NBC for her racy "Garden of Eden" broadcast bore the unanimous approval of the Federal Communications Commission, but privately the Commissioners were not unanimous.

Behind the scenes, some of them weren't keen on spanking either the lady or the broadcasting company. Norman Case, ex-Governor of Rhode Island, and a good Baptist, was the chief dissenter.

However, Chairman McNinch put his stiff reprimand across by preparing it privately, then showing it in advance to Commissioner Payne. Later, when the full FCC met, these two progressives stamped it its adoption.

SECRET NAVAL MOVEMENTS

The strict censorship which the Navy is clamping down on news pertains chiefly to ship movements. In the future there will be no announcements when vessels are dispatched, or where.

This gives the Navy considerably more freedom in maneuvering vessels around the Pacific without arousing the Japanese or what may be more important—getting the American public in a dither.

Antitoxins Now Used To Modify the Measles

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D. LAST WEEK we spoke of new studies that have been made in the subject of mumps. This week I find an article in a current medical magazine on control of another infectious disease—measles.

Dr. Clendening

Measles, like mumps, is not nearly as innocent as parents are sometimes inclined to believe. There is a definite death rate, but it is comforting to know that it has been steadily declining. In Massachusetts, for instance, in the year 1920, the death rate for measles was 9.1; in 1936 it was 0.8. This has been due probably more to intelligent isolation and quarantine of cases by parents than to any public health measures. There used to be an idea that children should have measles and get it over with, but that is not necessarily true.

The reduction in the incidence of nutritional disorders and deficiency diseases in children, together with improvement in housing conditions, has reduced the number of chronically ill and debilitated children in whom measles found many of its victims. Besides that, it is possible now to protect children in the face of an epidemic with various kinds of sera.

Antitoxins Used in Measles Antitoxins against measles are found in the blood of almost all pa-

A CASE FOR 3 DETECTIVES

By LEO BRUCE

COPYRIGHT BY LEO BRUCE, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST: Mrs. Mary Thurston, middle-aged wife of a retired English physician, is found murdered in bed during a week-end party at the Thurston home near London. Those in the house when Mrs. Thurston retired are her husband; Townsend, the author; Williams, the family lawyer; Strickland, a sportsman, and the servants. They find her a few seconds after three piercing screams had penetrated the house. No one else is found in the bedroom. The door was bolted from the inside and the only open window revealed a 20-foot drop to the ground. Below the bedroom window, Townsend finds the murder weapon, a bloodstained Chinese knife, taken from the Thurston hallway. Shortly afterwards Mr. Rider, the vicar, a dinner guest that evening, is found praying beside Mrs. Thurston's body. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 8

"WHAT I don't understand," said Williams, "is how Rider came to be beside Mary Thurston's bed, within half an hour of the murder. He left to go home long before 11, and the Vicarage is only just across the orchard."

"Could anyone have telephoned to him?" asked Strickland.

"Impossible. The telephone's out of order. Wires cut, probably."

"Then he can never have gone home," I said.

Williams rang the bell. "We'll ask Stall," he said. "Rider told us that he let him in."

The butler came. But I felt at once, looking at him, that he was on his guard. He glanced from one to another of us, as though wondering whence the attack would come.

"Oh, Stall," said Williams, "did you see Mr. Rider out?"

"On which occasion, sir? When he first left the house, before Mrs. Thurston had retired, I saw him out."

"I see. When did he return?"

"It must have been 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour after . . . the discovery, sir."

"For whom did he ask?"

"For Dr. Thurston, sir."

"And did you show him into the lounge?"

"No, sir. It was just then that the parlor-maid was took 'ysterical, sir. Very 'ysterical, she was. And I was 'urrying back to the kitchen. I left Mr. Rider to go into the lounge himself. I did not see him again, sir."

"He said nothing to you beyond asking for Dr. Thurston?"

"No, sir. Nothing. But he seemed agitated, sir."

"I see. You go to his church, don't you, Stall?"

"Yes, sir. I sing in the choir. Bass, sir."

"Thank you, Stall. You'd better get to bed now."

When the door was closed we exchanged glances, as though each wanted to see what the others thought of it.

"Extraordinary—about Rider," I said after a moment. But no one answered. So much was extraordinary. And so very extraordinary.

Leaving back in my chair I began considering each of the men who were in that house separately, as a possible murderer. It was not a pleasant occupation, for there was not one of them to whom I wished evil, or whom I had hitherto really disliked. But as each one presented himself to my doubt, I was faced again and again by the same blank wall. How had he got out? Those two bolts—I had pulled them back myself. Whoever had done it, if natural laws existed still, had left that room during the few moments it had taken us to run upstairs and break down the door. But how? How? I felt as though the doubt would lead me to madness. There was no way out of that room.

At last we decided to turn in. But when we were standing, waiting for someone to lead the way out of the room, young Strickland, the sportsman, said a rather tactless thing to Alec Norris, the novelist.

"Well," he said, "it seems that already your theory about murder has been proved to be wrong."

I had forgotten all about that conversation over the cocktails. The recollection gave me a start. But the effect of the remark on Norris was quite unexpected. He answered in a high-pitched voice, shrill with hysteria.

"Yes," he said. "I must have been wrong!" And he began to utter a laugh, which was low at first, grew louder and higher, until Dr. Tate, who was standing beside him, struck him across the mouth.

Norris stopped at once. "I'm sorry," he said.

"I'm sorry, too," said Dr. Tate. "But it's the only thing to do with hysteria. Couldn't have you waking the household. It's long past midnight."

Quite early the next morning those indefatigably brilliant private investigators, who seem to be always handy when a murder has been committed, began to arrive.

I had some knowledge of their habits, and guessed at once what had happened to bring them there. One had probably been staying in the district, another was a friend of Dr. Tate's, while a third, perhaps, had already been asked to stay with the Thurstons. At any rate, it was not long before the house seemed to be alive with them, crawling about on floors, applying lenses to the paintwork, and asking the servants the most unexpected questions.

The first on the scene was Lord Simon Plimsoll. He stepped out of the foremost of three Rolls-Royces, the second of which contained his man-servant, whose name I afterwards learned was Butterfield, and the third, a quantity of photographic apparatus. I happened to be outside the front door at the time, and heard him address his man. I was at first a little startled at his idiom, for it reminded me of a dialogue I had heard in a cabaret between two entertainers whose name I believe was Western, and it took me a few moments to believe that this was his natural mode of speech.

He handed me a cigar of superlative quality, and invited me to "spill the beans". This I did at some length. I told him in detail of the incredible mystery which confronted us, and the insoluble problem of the murderer's way of escape. When I had finished, he sighed.

"Another of these locked door cases," he said with palpable ennui. "I was hopin' it might be something new, what?"

But he came into the lounge, and glanced about him. "You say it happened in the room above this one. No footprints outside, I suppose?"

"No," I said, pleased that I had shown enough professional acumen to have looked for them last night. Then I led him to the scene of my search. He glanced cursorily at the shattered light bulb, and noted the place in which I had found the knife, stepping back to glance upward at the window. Then he stooped to examine the flower bed, but without disarranging the crease in his beautifully cut trousers. Finally he stepped back again and remained quite motionless, staring up at the windows above him.

As he did so I examined this young man. I had heard of him first some 10 years ago, and was surprised to find now that he appeared no older. But perhaps among other secrets he had discovered that of changeless youth. The length of his chin, like most other things about him, was excessive. But I liked him, because from the moment he arrived at that house the somewhat macabre atmosphere of the previous evening was dissipated. His cheerful and inquisitive nature seemed to discourage any morbid dwelling on the horror of Mary Thurston's death, and to induce everyone, whether bereaved or guilty, into a pleasant and eager state of curiosity.

I know that for my part from the time when I met Lord Simon I ceased to remember the ghastly moment when we had first looked into that locked bedroom—I even forgot more than a perfunctory duty of mourning. I became wholly absorbed in the fascinating problem which confronted us. And I have gathered that this is the experience of most people intimately connected with a murder which a first-rate private detective or criminologist is investigating.

Club Hears M. E. Noggle Speak on Photography

Color in Films Explained for Women's Group

M. E. Noggle was guest speaker Friday evening at the monthly meeting of the Women's Social club of the Presbyterian church. Despite inclement weather conditions about 35 members and guests gathered in the social room of the church for an hour of unique entertainment offered by Mr. Noggle.

Mrs. Hulse Hays, president, opened the meeting and Miss Clara Southard led the group in prayer. Mrs. Loring Evans, who has been appointed secretary to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Irma Stevenson, read the minutes of the last meeting. Mrs. Hays then introduced Mr. Noggle, who gave an interesting talk on "Color Photography."

Mr. Noggle opened his talk with an informal discussion of the origin of color in photography, telling of its discovery by two young men, players in an orchestra, and how they developed the practical film for ordinary cameras through the interest of an eastern manufacturer, who gave them the use of his laboratories for research. He said that the process of making color films is identical with the making of colored movies, the movies being only a number of stills projected on the screen in rapid succession. He then showed the spectrum, and explained how color is only the result of absorption and reflection of light on objects. He showed how this was accomplished by superimposing colored slides in the projecting machine to change the colors on the screen.

Mr. Noggle showed many views of familiar places within a radius of thirty miles around Circleville. The beauty of the pictures taken in the different seasons of the year, showing soft greens of the foliage and the beautiful clumps of wildflowers taken in the Spring, the brilliant coloring of the Summer scenes, the warm shades of the frost tinted Autumn pictures and concluding with the pastels of snow scenes in Winter could be realized only by seeing the pictures projected on the screen.

At the conclusion of the program, lunch was served around the tea table. The table was attractive in white appointments, a white pottery bowl of frosted twigs decorated with tiny red hearts forming the centerpiece. Tall white candles burned in crystal holders. Mrs. H. P. Folson served tea.

The members of the program committee included Mrs. A. D. Newmyer, chairman, Mrs. C. G. Stewart, Mrs. H. D. Jackson, Mrs.

The eighth grade under the guidance of J. L. Chilcote has organized a basketball team.

The members of the club are Jack Simison, Bob Moon, Gerald Ayers, Junior Geib, Don Valentine, Harry Clifton, John Woods, Paul Jackson, David Orr, Edward Dalton, Kenneth White, Paul Siegwald, Fred Barr, Glenn Barnhart, manager, and Glenn Griffey.

They have played four games to date, winning from Ashville twice and from Stoutsville; they lost to Adelphi.

Four games have been scheduled: Stoutsville, Pickaway, Adelphi, and Sugar Grove.

Anyone interested in scheduling a game may contact Mr. Chilcote.

STOOGES REVISE INVITATION LIST

At the Stooze meeting held Tuesday at 3:45 in the high school building, a revision of the invitation list for the Stooze dance was partially completed.

Club members are aiding with the sale of tickets for the President's Charity Ball.

A special practice for an assembly program to be presented Wednesday, Feb. 2, was held Wednesday night.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday evening at 7:30 at the home of Lewis Cooper.

Editorial

Do you belong to an organization? If so why do you belong? Are you there just for fun or because being a member of this particular group means something to you?

There are some students who belong to more than one or two organizations in high school. There must be a reason for this. Perhaps some like to see their names in the paper as belonging to such and such an organization or perhaps there is a real reason other than social. But, do you as members of the student body of Circleville high school believe you can join more than two organizations and be able to do your part in all of them?

Stop and think for a few minutes what your certain clubs mean to you. In every club you are supposed to learn to cooperate, to learn more about the problems of everyday life, to be able to make friends, and to become acquainted with the finer things in life.

The more timid members of C. H. S. who join these clubs should be given various duties to perform to make them enjoy their membership. Thus will they gradually emerge from their timidity and become more friendly.

If you want friends, be one. Take an interest in your club, help make it the outstanding organization in school and make it so interesting that other students will want to join.

When you have graduated from high school you will look back on the different activities in which you have taken part, what you have helped to plan, the good deeds you have done. Certainly these memories will linger long in your minds if each of you has done his part.

Manual Training Classes

Complete Drawing Courses

The seventh grade manual training class has completed their course in elementary drawing and now are ready to start work on their wood working project which is a breadboard.

The eighth grade classes have also finished their course in drawing and are now ready to start on their projects. They are making end tables, magazine racks, hall trees, tool cabinets, taboretts and lamps.

The freshman class have nearly finished their advanced drawing course after which they will make a blueprint of the projects they intend to make. Blue print making is a requirement in this course.

The next semester the sophomores begin their course in metal work.

NEW MICROPHONE ORDERED

A new crystal microphone has been recently ordered from the Allied Radio Corporation, Chicago, Illinois for the high school.

This will be used in assembly programs, on the football field, in connection with the new movie projector, graduation exercises, and other similar occasions. It will be used also, in the English classes to aid in the improvement of diction and enunciation.

STYLE WHIMSIES

Slacks are more popular than ever for resort wear.

SKETCH CLUB MAKES LIFE DRAWING IN WATERCOLOR

Louise Goldsberry posed for the Sketch club last Monday. Emily Gunning painted a water color and the rest of the club made pencil sketches. Mrs. Downing suggested to the club that they practice drawing eyes.

JOHNSON CLASS SEES PICTURES

Tuesday, boys of a seventh and eighth grade hygiene class under Samuel Johnson were shown a film, "Golden Champions" in connection with their course.

The orange as a part of the diet was the subject of the production shown on the school's projector. The budding process, cultivation, growth, picking, inspection, grading, packing and shipping of the fruit were pictured. Included in the reel were photographs of the Olympic games.

Principal Robert Terhune announced this week that in the future films will be shown for the benefit of hygiene and science classes. These are to be procured from the State Department of Visual Education.

WEST HIGH WINS DEBATE TUESDAY

Tuesday negative debaters of West high school scored a victory over Circleville's affirmative team, Ruth Bowsher and W. H. Nelson, in arguing the question: "Resolved, The Several States Should Adopt a Unicameral System of Legislation."

Speakers for West were Verna-delle Shepard and Don Baughman. Professor P. M. Poovey of Capital University judged the debate and afterwards made his criticism of each speaker's argument and delivery.

Eugene Dewey acted as chairman. On Tuesday, January 25, the Washington C. H. team will meet Circleville's negative debaters, Jo-anne Conyers and Eugene Dewey.

Circleville's affirmative team will go to Delaware high school, Tuesday, February 8, completing the schedule.

Robert Jewett, debate coach, stated that he is well pleased with the progress of his teams.

JUNIOR SKETCH CLUB PLANNED BY DOWNING

The high school art classes under Mrs. Downing have been very busy this week working in many different fields of art. Two of the classes are engaged in decorative flowers done in analogous color schemes with water colors. Others are interested in still life and leathering.

Mrs. Downing plans to form a junior sketch club upon popular request. The club will include any members of the seventh and eighth grades who wish to join.

Those interested are asked to watch the art bulletin board for further notices.

JUNIOR-SENIOR RESERVES DANCE DATE SETTLED

Junior and Senior girl reserves have set February 18, as the date for the dance sponsored jointly by them. Further details will be given later.

The Senior girl reserves' candy sale held at the donkey basketball game Monday, was very successful.

A new plan will be followed at the mid-year initiation February 2. Instead of a regular dinner a tea will be held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, with Helen Evans in charge of arrangements. Preceding this will be the formal initiation. The menu committee consists of Regina Hudnell, chairman, Betty Belz, and Constance Trimmer.

SAFETY LEAGUE FORMED

In order to promote safety for the students, Circleville high school is setting up a safety league in connection with Miller Fissell, deputy sheriff. The purpose of the new safety league is to carry out all the city regulations. The movement has its beginning in the schools because so many students ride bicycles and drive cars to and from school.

In the near future during the eighth period for the students, those who do not know how to drive will have the opportunity to learn and to put the driving laws into practice.

Pamphlets and other literature concerning safety will be distributed through the schools.

LIFE OF BEES SEEN IN FILMS

Wednesday afternoon, a movie entitled "The Realm of the Honeybee," was shown to grade and high school students.

Many interesting things were shown concerning the life of the bees.

Honey cannot be manufactured nor can it be imitated. The worker bee gathers the nectar, water, and pollen, while the nursing bee stays at the hive and feeds the young. The bee gathers only one kind of pollen on a trip, which it carries in pockets on its rear legs.

Most modern orchardists keep one hive of bees for every acre of land, because the bee is the most active agent in cross-pollination of plants and trees.

The hive is generally composed of ten frames. On these frames embossed beeswax is stretched to aid the bees in building their honey combs. In the fall solid frames of honey are taken from the hives.

In a swarm of bees, there is always one queen bee, several hundred drones, and thousands of workers. The queen bee lays from 1,500 to 2,000 eggs a day. In twenty-one days the egg changes from snow white larva, to pupa, to full grown bee.

When a hive becomes overcrowded a new virgin queen bee and the younger worker bees stay in the hive. The old queen and her workers move to a new hive, or an old tree trunk.

The film, which was shown at the Rotary club, Monday noon, was secured by Ed. Wallace from a baking company of Columbus.

The afterglow of the doings of the just past Farmers' Institute, Jerome Peters, St. Paul, 90 years of age in a few months hence, is the only person living to our knowledge who was connected with the local Farmers' Institute at its founding 48 years ago. Mr. Peters was also a charter member of the Pickaway County Fire Mutual at its beginning near 35 years ago. Many compliments have been paid to the ladies of the United Brethren church for the excellent meals they served during the Institute. One party, a fine feeder, said he put himself on the outside of at least a dollar and a half's worth of that good chicken dinner and it had cost him only 45 cents. Talked to the bosses about the place as to the number of meals they had served and said they could not give it in exact figures but thought 400 or slightly above would be about right. The net receipts will be available by Monday, then you'll have them... At the "Amateur show" Wednesday night, the attendance was estimated at 800, which is about 300 more than the auditorium comfortably seats... And we are not forgetting our county farm agent, F. K. Blair, who at the close of the Institute Thursday evening gave a fine 10-minute talk on the success of this present Institute and the ones he is already planning for next year. After hearing his talk we were impressed with the idea that it was a case of "the right man in the right place." And we wish to make special mention of the two instrumental solos by Betty Hickman and a real young Mr. Fournough of the Walnut township school orchestra. And without asking her about it we are sure that Miss Mary Tolbert is proud of her thirty-one piece orchestra. She is its teacher and her home is in Pickaway township.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Each recent year has brought to the screen a finer type of musical picture and 1937 is no exception. "The Firefly," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's impressive adaptation of Rodolphe Friml's memorable operetta, with Jeanette MacDonald in her seventeenth musical at the Cliftona theatre starting Sunday.

Allan Jones and Warren William as the star's leading men delighted the audience.

"The Firefly" presents a powerful story of dramatic romance, as well as a vehicle for remarkable music. M-G-M has gone the limit in its settings and in the artistry of presentation.

Hunt Stromberg and Robert Z. Leonard produced and directed, respectively, and in the opinion of this reporter the combination surpassed its Academy Award winning collaboration a year ago with "The Great Ziegfeld."

AT THE GRAND

Two stars of immense popularity, and of well deserved top rank among comedy players, come to the Grand theatre next Sunday in "Ever Since Eve," the Cosmopolitan production which has its local premiere there.

They are Marion Davies, the lovely blonde comedienne, and Robert Montgomery, the debonair youth who has been leading man in so many gay movies.

Peters Veteran

The afterglow of the doings of the just past Farmers' Institute, Jerome Peters, St. Paul, 90 years of age in a few months hence, is the only person living to our knowledge, who was connected with the local Farmers' Institute at its founding 48 years ago. Mr. Peters was also a charter member of the Pickaway County Fire Mutual at its beginning near 35 years ago. Many compliments have been paid to the ladies of the United Brethren church for the excellent meals they served during the Institute. One party, a fine feeder, said he put himself on the outside of at least a dollar and a half's worth of that good chicken dinner and it had cost him only 45 cents. Talked to the bosses about the place as to the number of meals they had served and said they could not give it in exact figures but thought 400 or slightly above would be about right. The net receipts will be available by Monday, then you'll have them... At the "Amateur show" Wednesday night, the attendance was estimated at 800, which is about 800 more than the auditorium comfortably seats... And we are not forgetting our county farm agent, F. K. Blair, who at the close of the Institute Thursday evening gave a fine 10-minute talk on the success of this present Institute and the ones he is already planning for next year. After hearing his talk we were impressed with the idea that it was a case of "the right man in the right place." And we wish to make especial mention of the two instrumental solos by Betty Hickman and a real young Mr. Fossnaugh of the Walnut township school orchestra. And without asking her about it we are sure that Miss Mary Tolbert is proud of her thirty-one piece orchestra. She is his teacher and her home is in Pickaway township.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Each recent year has brought to the screen a finer type of musical picture and 1937 is no exception. "The Firefly," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's impressive adaptation of Rolf Friml's memorable operetta, with Jeanette MacDonald in her seventeenth musical role at the Cliftona theatre starting Sunday.
Allan Jones and Warren William as the star's leading men delighted the audience.
"The Firefly" presents a powerful story of dramatic romance, as well as a vehicle for remarkable music. M-G-M has gone the limit in its settings and in the artistry of presentation.
Hunt Stromberg and Robert Z. Leonard produced and directed, respectively, and in the opinion of this reporter the combination surpassed its Academy Award winning collaboration a year ago with "The Great Ziegfeld."

AT THE GRAND

Two stars of immense popularity, and of well deserved top rank among comedy players, come to the Grand theatre next Sunday in "Ever Since Eve," the Cosmopolitan production which has its local premiere there.
They are Marion Davies, the lovely blonde comedienne, and Robert Montgomery, the debonair youth who has been leading man in so many gay movies.
Miss Davies and Montgomery are co-starred in what is described as the liveliest, fastest-moving farce either has played in for a long time.

IN PLAYING for a no trump game it is almost invariably better, if you have other suits safely stopped, to take the sure losers at the top of some suit for the purpose of building lower cards, than to try an early finesse in another suit. If your finesse fails, you may not then have enough rounds left to set up your winning trick in the other suit.

South opened the bidding on this deal, after a pass by East, with 1-No Trump. North bid 2-No Trump and South 3-No Trump.

The spade 3 was the original lead, which South won with the J. He then ran four rounds of clubs and finessed the diamond J, which was returned, which South won. The diamonds A and K were cashed and a heart led. West won with the K and cashed two spades, setting the contract, as another heart trick was lost.

As the spade suit furnished no great danger, South should have immediately attempted to set up one heart trick. This, together with two spade tricks, two diamonds and four clubs, would have given him game, without having to resort to a finesse in the diamond suit.

W. P. A. PROJECT CONSPIRACY HIT IN COURT TRIAL

Four Ross County Federal Workers and Clarksburg Dealer Found Guilty

sentences within the limits defined by statute.

WPA officials said it was the first case regarding complaints on operations on a project in Ohio ever to come to trial. The defendants were charged with having trucks purchased in the names of laborers in order to give them an increased wage rating as "truck-owner-drivers," but the government contended the laborers received only a small part of the raise.

The indictment also alleged loss of federal government gasoline at Mound City and declared workmen had done work for some of the men on government "time."

The five men heard their convictions announced by the court clerk without stirring in their seats and without noticeable emotions. All of them declined comment on the outcome. Stauderman, acquitted, came to their defense, however, saying: "I don't feel any of these boys are guilty." Assistant U. S. District Attorney Ray O'Donnell in final argument to the jury acknowledged the government had a "weak case" against Stauderman.

15 Ballots Taken

After discharge of the jury, C. J. Murray, West Jefferson, foreman, disclosed that 15 ballots were taken during the three hours and 58 minutes of deliberation. He said a vote was taken separately on each defendant. Stauderman being found innocent on the first ballot, Wallenhorst and Mossbarger on the second, and Cutright on the eight, according to Murray.

As the verdict against her husband was read, Mrs. Cutright, a young woman, bowed her head in tears. Mrs. Mossbarger and her young daughter, apparently of high school age, also wept, the girl hiding her face on her mother's shoulder. Mossbarger's son, seemingly not much older than his sister, kept back his tears but shielded his eyes with his hand.

Mrs. Sampson came to the table where the defendants sat and whispered to both Cutright, a former boarder in her home, and her husband:

"Don't give up." Neither man replied.

Stauderman waited until bond arrangements were made in the clerk's office for three of the others and then left with his mother who said she would have been "dead" if the verdict had been adverse in his case.

The evidence was submitted to the jury at 4:56 p. m. The jurors were recessed for dinner at 6:14. The members dined at a restaurant under the eyes of court bailiffs, resuming their deliberations in the jury room at 7:40. At 10:20 they marched back to the courtroom and announced they had reached their decision. They were discharged after being polled in open court.

In his charge Judge Underwood ruled it was not necessary to prove any loss by the government but only the act of conspiracy to defraud.

His instructions to the jury, to which the defense took several exceptions indicating an intention to appeal on error, also set forth that a controversial bulletin containing WPA regulations for securing "relief owner driven" trucks should be construed as having "the force of law."

The defense maintained throughout the trial that Wallenhorst, the engineer, never received instructions contained in the bulletin, but the judge struck at any presumption of ignorance of the information therein.

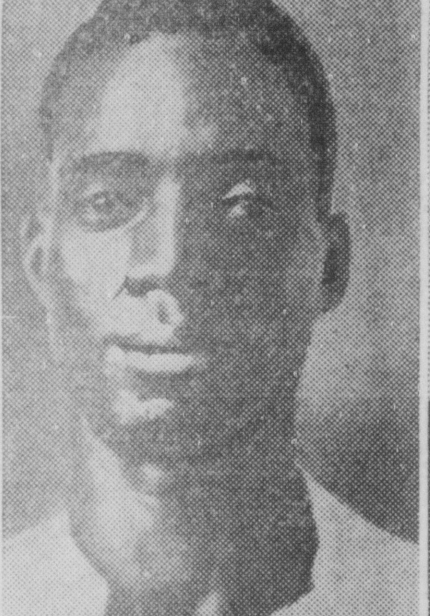

Admitting lack of evidence against Stauderman, O'Donnell told the jury:

"We don't connect Stauderman with any of these automobiles (trucks). As to the others, I think we have a strong case. If I had the same opinion of the others, I would say go out and acquit all of 'em."

Garrett Claypool, co-defense counsel, charged in his final statement to the jury that 12 of the 14 truck drivers, all government witnesses committed perjury either when they signed certificates of ownership of their trucks before notaries public or in their court testimony.

Claypool said that 12 of the 14

DISAPPEARANCE of Ruth Baumgardner, Ohio Wesleyan university co-ed and the slaying of Ohio Highway Patrolman George Conn were believed solved when one of four suspects held at St. Clairsville, O., "confessed". The other three men held were Charles Ford, Bernard Masullo and Pete Soreno. Miss Baumgardner, whose parents live in Lakewood, O., Cleveland suburb, vanished May 5, 1937. Conn was killed Sept. 27.

They explained heavy snows are needed to successfully trap rabbits. When rabbits can find an abundance of natural feed they refuse that offered in traps.

REV. NOE TO GO ON AIR DESPITE STRENGTH LOSS

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 22.—(UP)—The Rev. Israel H. Noe, 21 days without food or water, rallied his waning strength today and prepared to jeopardize his chances for life by going to a radio station and making a 15-minute talk.

Physicians believed the physical collapse which they consider inevitable was not far away, but Noe pushed on with his fast in an attempt to prove the validity of his "world philosophy"—that a man can do without food and live forever. For months he has been delivering a Saturday night religious talk on a Memphis radio station. Despite the fact that he has been deposed as dean of the Episcopal Cathedral of St. Mary, he has no intention of abandoning the practice.

All preparations have been made for a collapse. Hospital attendants have received their instructions; an ambulance stands ready for Noe's use; and his friends are prepared to see that he has the best of medical attention.

It has now been a year and 23 days since any solid food with the exception of the Communion wafers, has passed Noe's lips.

denied from the witness stand that they were the real owners of the trucks purchased in their names.

"That was an impudent thing to do," he declared. He added that two of the truck drivers, admitted they were the actual owners of the trucks.

On conviction of the five men, their attorneys moved that their bonds remain at $1,000 as fixed previously. The court ruled this impossible and set bond at $2,500. The clerk's office disclosed that actually each convicted man was required to have two bondsmen on bonds of $2,500 each.

wood, was kidnaped at Delaware and taken to Steubenville. Later, Johnson was reported as saying, she was taken to Pittsburgh where he lost track of her.

Gaston Stickler, Cleveland private detective who has been working on the Baumgardner case since shortly after her disappearance from a sorority house, said he discredited the "confessions" and reports that Miss Baumgardner had been kidnaped. The girl's mother also said the report "sounds like one of the many meaningless clues" in connection with her disappearance.

Taken To Freeport

Authorities took Ford and Masullo yesterday to the place near Freeport where Patrolman Conn's body was found to reconstruct the crime. Capt. George Mingle of the state patrol and Detective Inspector Walter Monaghan of Pittsburgh conducted the investigation.

Pittsburgh police said they had not been asked to search for the Baumgardner girl.

Col. Black said the highway patrol had investigated dozens of reports concerning the Conn murder in recent months but that the case "has not been solved." Conn was shot down after he had stopped an automobile to question its occupants.

Hoover Says Ross Killer Not Involved in West Coast Crime

for a career of kidnaping, from those two cases.

Anders, 30, taciturn former lumberjack who made a bold attack on G-men after leading them to the scene of the Ross slaying, was held under close guard today while Hoover remained in St. Paul to work out "several other details" of the Ross kidnaping.

Hoover did not elaborate on the missing details.

Since announcement last Monday night of Anders' capture at a race track betting window near Los Angeles, Calif., Hoover has disclosed these developments:

Anders fully confessed the kidnaping and slaying of Ross, and the murder of J. Atwood Gray, who aided in the kidnaping.

Recovery of the bodies of Ross and Gray from the Wisconsin woods hideout.

Virtually all the $50,000 ransom has been accounted for; $14,400 found on Anders, $30,000 recovered from a northern Minnesota cache, and the remainder apparently used on high living and gambling since last October.

Hoover said abduction of Ross as he drove along a road west of Chicago with his former secretary, Miss Florence Freilage, the night of Sept. 25 was a "last minute" inspiration on the part of Anders.

Robbery was the motive for stopping Ross' expensive automobile, according to Hoover.

"Anders was angered when he found that Ross was carrying only a little money, so he turned it into a kidnaping," Hoover said.

Ross was taken to a shallow dugout near Emilie, Minn., and held there by Gray while Anders returned to the Chicago area to negotiate for the ransom. The ransom was paid the night of Oct. 8. Two or three days later, the hideout having been moved to a slightly larger dugout near Spooner, Wis., Anders shot Ross and Gray.

Hoover indicated that Anders will be transferred to Chicago for trial on the kidnaping and murder charge, for which the federal government could access the death penalty.

political contributions might have hindered the United Mine Workers' gift of $450,000 to the Roosevelt presidential campaign in 1936.

Interest Indicated

It does not follow from Mr. Roosevelt's press conference statement that he will ask for such legislation, or any legislation dealing with labor organizations. He previously has indicated interest in the British act without proposing legislation. Earlier this week after conferring with his business advisory council, Mr. Roosevelt let it be known that he preferred a listing and reporting of organized labor expenditures to imposing controls through compulsory incorporation. The president said the proposed accounting device followed the lines of the British act. But it falls short of British control legislation.

Last February, however, Mr. Roosevelt told an interviewer that he would like to see both capital and labor put in a position of strict observance of its contractual obligations.

Critics of enactments created by labor laws enacted in 1932 and 1935 have felt that government should move also to make labor more responsible for its actions and for observance of contracts. Business desire for such legislation has increased since enactment of the Wagner Labor Relations act, partly because it is argued that the "unfair labor practices" specified in that act include only actions of employers and no action of labor is so defined.

Reports of Lawrence Warner, manager, showed the organization enjoyed the best volume of business in its history during 1937 due to good crops. The organization handled 158,258 bushels of corn and 242,293 bushels of wheat. Sales during the year totaled $500,926.39.

Following the business session, Ben Foght, of the Ohio Farmers Grain and Supply Assn., of Port Clinton, presented an inspirational address discussing the opportunities for service which come to persons.

Approximately 50 persons attended the annual meeting. The Pickaway Grain Co. has 154 stockholders and serves about 700 farmers.

Annual meetings of the Farm Bureau and the Pickaway Live Stock Assn. will be held in Memorial hall next Saturday, beginning at 10 a. m. The meeting of the livestock organization will be held first.

Speakers include Mrs. Ruth Steva, a trustee of the Ohio Farm Bureau, and M. J. Briggs, assistant general manager and treasurer of the Indiana Farm Bureau Cooperative Assn.

Music will be furnished by the 4-H club band and a chorus of young people under the direction of Miss Mary Ruth Tolbert, Pickaway township. The chorus will hold a rehearsal Saturday night in Memorial hall.

W. P. A. PROJECT CONSPIRACY HIT IN COURT TRIAL

Four Ross County Federal Workers and Clarksburg Dealer Found Guilty

sentences within the limits defined by statute.

WPA officials said it was the first case regarding complaints on operations on a project in Ohio ever to come to trial. The defendants were charged with having trucks purchased in the names of laborers in order to give them an increased wage rating as "truck-owner-drivers," but the government contended the laborers received only a small part of the raise.

The indictment also alleged loss of federal government gasoline at Mound City and declared workmen had done work for some of the men on government "time."

The five men heard their convictions announced by the court clerk without stirring in their seats and without noticeable emotions. All of them declined comment on the outcome. Stauderman, acquitted, came to their defense, however, saying: "I don't feel any of these boys are guilty."

Assistant U. S. District Attorney Ray O'Donnell in final argument to the jury acknowledged the government had a "weak case" against Stauderman.

15 Ballots Taken

After discharge of the jury, C. J. Murray, West Jefferson, foreman, disclosed that 15 ballots were taken during the three hours and 58 minutes of deliberation. He said a vote was taken separately on each defendant, Stauderman being found innocent on the first ballot, Wallenhorst and Mossbarger on the second, and Cutright on the eight, according to Murray.

As the verdict against her husband was read, Mrs. Cutright, a young woman, bowed her head in tears. Mrs. Mossbarger and her young daughter, apparently of high school age, also wept, the girl hiding her face on her mother's shoulder. Mossbarger's son, seemingly not much older than his sister, kept back his tears but shielded his eyes with his hand.

Mrs. Sampson came to the table where the defendants sat and whispered to both Cutright, a former boarder in her home, and her husband:

"Don't give up." Neither man replied.

Stauderman waited until bond arrangements were made in the clerk's office for three of the others and then left with his mother who said she would have been "dead" if the verdict had been adverse in his case.

The evidence was submitted to the jury at 4:56 p. m. The jurors were recessed for dinner at 6:14. The members dined at a restaurant under the eyes of court bailiffs, resuming their deliberations in the jury room at 7:40. At 10:20 they marched back to the courtroom and announced they had reached their decision. They were discharged after being polled in open court.

In his charge Judge Underwood ruled it was not necessary to prove any loss by the government but only the act of conspiracy to defraud.

His instructions to the jury, to which the defense took several exceptions indicating an intention to appeal on error, also set forth that a controversial bulletin containing WPA regulations for securing "relief owner driven" trucks should be construed as having "the force of law."

The defense maintained throughout the trial that Wallenhorst, the engineer, never received instructions contained in the bulletin, but the judge struck at any presumption of ignorance of the information therein.

Admitting lack of evidence against Stauderman, O'Donnell told the jury:

"We don't connect Stauderman with any of these automobiles (trucks). As to the others, I think we have a strong case. If I had the same opinion of the others, I would say go out and acquit all of 'em."

Garrett Claypool, co-defense counsel, charged in his final statement to the jury that 12 of the 14 truck drivers, all government witnesses committed perjury either when they signed certificates of ownership of their trucks before notaries public or in their court testimony.

Claypool said that 12 of the 14

Four Held in Abduction, Slaying

Booker Johnson, Pete Soreno, Charles Ford, Bernard Masullo

DISAPPEARANCE of Ruth Baumgardner, Ohio Wesleyan university co-ed and the slaying of Ohio Highway Patrolman George Conn were believed solved when one of four suspects held at St. Clairsville, O., "confessed." But Colonel Lynn Black, superintendent of Ohio State police, said he doubted the prisoner, Booker Johnson said he and the three other men abducted Miss Baumgardner and took her to the vicinity of Pittsburgh, according to deputies at St. Clairsville. The other three men held were Charles Ford, Bernard Masullo and Pete Soreno. Miss Baumgardner, whose parents live in Lakewood, O., Cleveland suburb, vanished May 5, 1937. Conn was killed Sept. 27.

Sportsmen Pleased With Rabbit Trapping Score

Despite unfavorable weather conditions the official score on the rabbit-trapping experiment conducted during the last week on the Harry Montelius farm, Pickaway township, is eleven bunnies.

Fred Harlowe, of Newark, district conservation officer in charge of game propagation, and Clarence Francis, his assistant and county officer, are highly pleased with the results. They explained heavy snows are needed to successfully trap rabbits. When rabbits can find an abundance of natural feed they refuse that offered in traps.

Ten traps were used on the closed area. These traps were invented and patented by Mr. Harlowe. "We had to have a different type of trap than those on the market to successfully carry on our propagation program," Mr. Harlowe explained. "Since necessity is the mother of invention, I started work on a trap I thought would be satisfactory. I made all the traps we are using."

His workshop was the kitchen at his home. Pickaway county is the first place the traps have been given a trial.

The traps are constructed of galvanized metal and are of the box type. They are 24 inches long, seven inches high and six inches wide. When set both ends are open and the rabbit can see directly through the trap. Sliding doors are used at the ends. They are tripped with a pedal in the center of the trap.

To prove the value of the new type trap, a rabbit was kept in one of them for three days and provided food and water. The rabbit was in perfect condition when released. Rabbits can be removed from the traps, transported to other areas and never touched.

The conservation officers hope to take about 50 rabbits from the Montelius farm, an area closed to hunting. They will be distributed throughout the county.

Mr. Harlowe announced Saturday that the Adkins farm in Pickaway township, formerly the Dreshbach farm, has been obtained as a closed area and 60 breeder rabbits have been released.

The district officer said the conservation department has ordered 50 of the traps after hearing the results of the experiment conducted here.

JURY PROBES 'CONFESSIONS'

(Continued from Page One) wood, was kidnaped at Delaware and taken to Steubenville. Later, Johnson was reported as saying, she was taken to Pittsburgh where he lost track of her.

Gaston Stickeler, Cleveland private detective who has been working on the Baumgardner case since shortly after her disappearance from a sorority house, said he discredited the "confessions" and reports that Miss Baumgardner had been kidnaped. The girl's mother also said the report "sounds like one of the many meaningless clues" in connection with her disappearance.

Taken To Freeport Authorities took Ford and Masullo yesterday to the place near Freeport where Patrolman Conn's body was found to reconstruct the crime. Capt. George Mingle of the state patrol and Detective Inspector Walter Monaghan of Pittsburgh conducted the investigation.

Pittsburgh police said they had not been asked to search for the Baumgardner girl.

Col. Black said the highway patrol had investigated dozens of reports concerning the Conn murder in recent months but that the case "has not been solved." Conn was shot down after he had stopped an automobile to question its occupants.

TWO KIDNAPINGS LAID TO ANDERS

Anders, 30, taciturn former lumberjack who made a bold attack on G-men after leading them to the scene of the Ross slaying, was held under close guard today while Hoover remained in St. Paul to work out "several other details" of the Ross kidnaping.

Hoover did not elaborate on the missing details.

Since announcement last Monday night of Anders' capture at a race track betting window near Los Angeles, Calif., Hoover has disclosed these developments:

Anders fully confessed the kidnaping and slaying of Ross, and the murder of J. Atwood Gray, who aided in the kidnaping.

Recovery of the bodies of Ross and Gray from the Wisconsin woods hideout.

Virtually all the $50,000 ransom has been accounted for; $14,400 found on Anders, $30,000 recovered from a northern Minnesota cache, and the remainder apparently used on high living and gambling since last October.

Hoover said abduction of Ross as he drove along a road west of Chicago with his former secretary, Miss Florence Freilage, the night of Sept. 25 was a "last minute" inspiration on the part of Anders.

Robbery was the motive for stopping Ross' expensive automobile, according to Hoover.

"Anders was angered when he found that Ross was carrying only a little money, so he turned it into a kidnaping," Hoover said.

Ross was taken to a shallow-dugout near Emille, Minn., and held there by Gray while Anders returned to the Chicago area to negotiate for the ransom. The ransom was paid the night of Oct. 8. Two or three days later, the hideout having been moved to a slightly larger dug-out near Spooner, Wis., Anders shot Ross and Gray.

Hoover indicated that Anders will be transferred to Chicago for trial on the kidnaping and murder charge, for which the federal government could access the death penalty.

Business Urging Revisions In Laws Controlling Big Industries

political contributions might have hindered the United Mine Workers' gift of $450,000 to the Roosevelt presidential campaign in 1936.

Interest Indicated

It does not follow from Mr. Roosevelt's press conference statement that he will ask for such legislation, or any legislation dealing with labor organizations. He previously has indicated interest in the British act without proposing legislation. Earlier this week after conferring with his business advisory council, Mr. Roosevelt let it be known that he preferred a listing and reporting of organized labor expenditures to imposing controls through compulsory incorporation. The president said the proposed accounting device followed the lines of the British act. But it falls short of British control legislation.

Last February, however, Mr. Roosevelt told an interviewer that he would like to see both capital and labor put in a position of strict observance of its contractual obligations.

Critics of conditions created by labor laws enacted in 1932 and 1935 have felt that government should move also to make labor more responsible for its actions and for observance of contracts.
